

Message from Mary Magdalene for the October 2011 Full Moon

Today is Tuesday, 11 October 2011, and Carolyn is going to take a message from Mary Magdalene in relation to the October full moon:

My dear friends, I would like to think of this rather as a message of inspiration, and what I mean by that is this. My friends and I have spoken to you many times about some of the trials and tribulations that were about to come to Earth, and you have already seen some of them. There have been storms and floods, and as I say this, I think particularly of the devastating floods that happened in Vermont, though there were others; and I wish to say this - do not look upon these events as punishment in any way, shape or form, because these trials and tribulations are not meant to be as such. But rather, the Earth is coming into balance, and when you see a hurricane or, in other parts of the world typhoons, when you see people losing homes, it's hard to think of the Earth as being in struggle for balance, but it is exactly that.

We have spoken to you of change, and chaos in particular as it relates to change. You learned in Science 101 that energy is not destroyed but rather it changes such as water, ice cubes, steam; these elements were not destroyed but rather changed. And it is the way when balance comes to Earth, and there are changes from one layer of reality to another. There is an element of chaos, and we are defining chaos in this respect, this change. In this instance, there are energy particles upon the Earth that are moving to a higher level. Vibration is changing, yes, but you have not seen yet, as plates of the Earth are being reformed, and so there will also be a period of volcanic eruptions, some people call volcanism, earthquakes. That'll come a little bit later, but the elements of water and wind have been the first to go through this period of chaos, and I have to tell you it is not finished yet.

We look upon this as something very normal, natural because the status quo is not being allowed to stay unchanged. Earth and her inhabitants will be moving up to the next higher level, and much has to occur before this happens. In preparing for these changes, there will be much that will seem as if it is being destroyed; but there is really no destruction here, but rather change. For too long there have been so many abuses in the financial systems, the way they are, and this cannot be allowed to be tolerated any longer. So many have suffered at the hands of a few, and so there are individuals on Earth who are attempting to corner the entire financial market and bend it to their desires, and not thinking in terms of the good of humanity.

There are also people living in countries that have abused what they should expect as their own level of living, and I'm thinking in particular of countries where people have demanded much from their governments, and the governments have tried to comply but in that effort to comply, they have also been very wasteful of their own resources; and I don't need to go into that, to discuss the different countries, but you are well aware of the challenges in the financial markets with the different countries, and so there will be a great change here. This is not meant to be a lesson on finances and the economy, but rather statements so that you understand, as you face these challenges, that these changes that are coming about are really a lesson in balance.

There is so much that is out of balance upon this planet, and the scales have weighed very heavily on actions that have not been supportive of the planet or of humanity. There are only a few tools that Mother Earth has – wind, water, fire; and when the Earth moves, there are changes in the structures below the surface of the Earth that are moving towards perfection; and it might not seem that way to you when you see destruction, you hear the cries of people mourning their losses, and so it is almost like the birth of the child. There is much pain and suffering, but in the end new life is brought forth, and that is what is happening in the Earth right now. It's hard to see that at times, that there is new life coming, but I wanted to remind all of you that there is new life, a more balanced life, and in the balancing of this life, humans will even have a different outlook upon what they feel that they need and what they feel that they want.

Accumulation for the sake of accumulating is not a good thing. People should only take what they need, with the idea that they will leave for others resources that others need, too, and what is at the basis of this is a new sense of oneness that will come forth, where you look at your brothers and sisters, and truly feel that you are related to them in some fashion, that there is a thread of relationship among all peoples and among the Earth itself, all of those life forms; the animals, the raw materials that the Earth holds in trust for you. And so this sense of renewal must be carried forth. It's fine for trees to be cut down but they must be replaced somewhere. You see just this one item, the cutting down of trees and the clearing of land, if this is not in balance the planet itself becomes even more imbalanced.

Great tracts of land have been cleared in the Amazon forest, on other continents, burning and slashing of undergrowth, which seems to people to be undesirable, yet they are the lungs of the planet, and in this clearing animals have lost their habitat; and the time is coming when humans will change their sense belonging to a community, a community that is geared towards the well-being of every facet of that community, and that means the human beings who walk upon the Earth and the animals that need a place there also. It means that all of the different plant expressions that were placed there for medicinal reasons; these are being lost in the Amazon forests that are being cleared.

There are great tracts of land that are being cleared, and there are animals that need that growth to wander and prosper; and so the objective of all of this is that balance and harmony must be brought forth for the greater good of all, and for this to happen there must be many attitudes that need to change, attitudes of human beings that encompass love and harmony for all. All was brought forth on this planet for the use of all, and that means minerals and grasses and trees, and animals and human beings. None of these facets are less worthy than another. There is worth among all, and they were all placed there for a purpose, and they need to be treasured and understood for what they are.

And so my message is this, my friends. When you read of things that are occurring now, whether it is in the financial area or whether it is what seems like the Earth is up in arms, so to speak, know that, as I said earlier, this is not a punishment. The Earth is not being punished and human beings are not being punished. It happens for a greater good, this greater good of oneness where all will appreciate everything that is here, and treasure it because what must happen is there must be a period of preparation before Heaven can be brought down to Earth, before all recognize that you are all brothers and sisters, and stewards of the planet itself, and a reminder that you must be good stewards, all of you. Not a certain segment of the population but all; and there have been many that felt that assets, the dollars, the gold was their god, and they would do anything for their god.

They would take away all manner of support from other human beings to gather up all of what they looked upon as godliness; and this must change. It must change because this is the time of change. This is the designated time of change, and for all of you who feel lonely, who feel like they're excess baggage upon the planet because, maybe they don't have their home, they've lost their home or they've lost job, and they are struggling to see the wisdom in all of this; and I say to you, underneath of all this difficulty there is wisdom, and much will be learned of it. And as you know, when something is taken away, there is a great amount of appreciation for what was lost, and there will be those who will awaken to the fact that there needs to be nothing lost, that working together and loving one another means that all will find their place upon this beautiful planet; and that is what all of this is leading to.

You see, what has happened over many years has been change, and not necessarily a good change. There were those peoples in the beginning, who lived upon the out-of-doors without staying in one place, to what you might call a home. They weren't living and working under artificial lights. They lived in the freedom of the woods, the glens, the streams, and all about them all the time was the beauty of nature, and they understood that they were a part of that, and only took what they needed. And then things changed; not for the better, I might say. There were those who felt that much of the natural resources needed to be cornered in their corner, and imbalance started because people started living, spending all of their time in places where they became disconnected from nature.

Nature is that elevating, is that elevating structure that brings peace and harmony to human beings, because it points the way to their Creator. It is impossible to watch the beauty of the rising Sun, to watch it set in the evening, and not marvel at its wonder. It is impossible to look at the starry nights, at all of that glimmer and twinkling of stars, and not understand that place that you hold on the planet. It is impossible to look at flowers and grasses, as we said, and animals out in the world, without feeling the ties, somehow to all of this. It is the quiet of the mountains where perhaps the sounds that one hears is the babbling of a brook, the gurgling of a stream, sounds that truly elevate the spirit. So much of that has changed as people gave up this, and lived and worked in places of high rise cement buildings that have lighting that was sterile, that was not invigorating, and so many forgot their connection to the Earth.

And so this is a time of great change; but that change, even though painful, is heading towards something magnificent, and I came forth just to remind you that each and every one of you are loved because of who and what you are. You are loved and treasured because there are particles of that magnificent Creator that you carry, that we call a soul. Each and every one of you are important, even though there are masses of humanity. The Creator created this way, brought forth elements in abundance, and sometimes in this abundance, people forget how important they are because they look around and see so many. But I tell you, each and every one of you are more important than you ever have thought in any way, how magnificent you truly are.

We will not allow you to be lost. Yes, there will be some that will transition in the midst of all of this, but you will come back like a tree that blooms in the Spring. You will come back again like flowers that carpet the Earth. The soul is never destroyed. It comes again to blossom, to rejuvenate. It is the way it is, and I've just come forth to remind you of this. No matter what you have been involved with that wasn't right for your soul; whether it be drugs, whether it be this insatiable desire to accumulate, whether it be forgetful, unmindful of your brothers and sisters and the planet itself, everything is moving forward.

It is this cycle, this ending of this cycle that means that there is a destiny here, a destiny for something larger and greater and more magnificent, where everyone will know the connection to their Creator, and their place upon the Earth, and what their responsibility is to carry out what is required for balance and love and beauty among everything. And so it is.
