

August 8, 2008, a Time Marker

Reading Earth Records

There has been much said about this date from the view point of numerology and astrology. We wish to speak about this date from another perspective.

This date is a time marker and this marker was placed in the consciousness of the people on Earth for several reasons. When you came into the world before this incarnation, you viewed the possibilities of your lifetime. You also chose the place where you would incarnate and chose your parents. You also asked those souls who would work with you to come and help you to accomplish a larger goal. Their willingness to help you also furthers their destiny when they are involved with your mission.

As you reviewed the events in your chosen life path for the incarnation, you noticed time markers during the many years as if they were a passage or backdrop set up against your personal events in your lifetime. This happens to everyone. Each soul has their own time markers and there are also time markers for humanity.

This date is one such time marker for all of humanity and China in particular. Let us begin with China first. China has been a closed society for much of its long history as this was a chance for development of its own style and point of view. They chose to do this for the development of their own national identity and also for their own spiritual path as a country and also as individuals.

As it has been demonstrated, there has been a gradual opening up of the country's persona as its citizens are now interested in joining the world in the direction of their growth. This has been happening on a gradual basis as manufacturing opportunities have been given to them and their citizens have been interacting with the world using the Internet and other forms of communication.

You might say that the Chinese want to be a citizen of the world now. They are proud of their long years of culture and how they have trained their connection to their spirit and the world of art, nature, and their understanding of the human physical. These personal and national treasures were developed because they chose this manner to develop their national and personal culture which seemed to others like they were a closed society.

This time marker is the moment when they are now ready to lead the world but from a different perspective. They will now seek to lead the world through cooperation and while they wish to respect other countries, they want the world to respect their own nature. What you will soon see is an openness in their national identity and in that openness they will develop a line of freedom in their country that the world has not considered possible.

They will move towards personal self expression instead of expressing their originality through the representation of their culture through the government. This date will be a grand changing of identity for the Chinese. They will still be proud of their national identity, but they will view the world through the eyes of individuals and that framework will grow.

You will see great changes in the interaction of China with the rest of the world and it will be seen soon. The works of their past great philosophers, where the dignity of the individual was deemed important, will shine forth again and act as a foundation for current expression for the Chinese.

You will see cooperation and acceptance, first, for their own people, and then the rest of the world. This is the time marker and all will feel it as there is a great change on the horizon with regard to China.

For the rest of humanity, this is a great time marker also. It is the time when humanity will start to feel the shackles of domination start to fall away. There is much freedom in this and great spiritual influences will start to permeate the human race. For some time now humans have wanted to be free and they have risen up in myriad places and the dark have subjugated them.

This is the time when the energy for personal freedom is at hand. People will not only start to feel this energy work in their personal belief system, but they will start to FEEL free. Freedom, cooperation, brotherhood and love will start to mobilize the mind and hearts of humans as the energy of this date works its way from the heart to the mind and to the determination of expression. This is the beginning of a great energy of peace being released to the world.

What we say does not mean that these changes will be immediate. No it will take some time for these energies to be released through the human being and start to be expressed in deed, but it will come. It will come because this is energy that cannot be denied in the hearts of the masses.

There will be clashes between those who still wish to control as they will not give up so easily, but this energy will be irresistible as it percolates through the different societies of people in the world.

You will start to see real changes in the world within six months. Mind you the confrontations will seem to intensify as those who wish to be free will confront those who wish to control. So know that there will be much in the way of warring energies, but it has a purpose as the yoke of oppression is in the process of being overthrown.

Along with these movements of different factions of humanity, there will be an intensifying of Earth changes. These changes will and are currently being expressed as volcanic activity, and the storms that you have seen this year will intensify.

Financial markets will still seem to be unstable. This is the result of past indulgences of greed. You are now seeing the greed factor in many segments of your life. Know that this is a learning lesson for those who wish to control the financial markets. One cannot take what belongs to your brother and not have consequences. Goods and services must be honorably priced and workers must be given an honorable wage. These are lessons that have not been learned yet and in the learning process, there will be great struggles.

Peace, honor, equality and respect cannot come in a vacuum. The lessons cannot be learned until humanity sees both sides of the picture. Those who run corporations will soon realize that they need the consumer and you will eventually see a change from arrogance to cooperation, but this will take longer for this energy to work its way through this life wave.
